

Rare Species Fund Helps Pass Conservation Law

The Multinational Species Conservation Funds Semipostal Stamp (MSCFSS) legislation authored by Congressman Henry E. Brown is a fiscally responsible measure that utilizes no taxpayer dollars and will assist in the conservation of some of the most endangered, wildlife species on this planet. The stamp will raise public awareness for these endangered species and the proceeds, The MSCFSS funds help preserve several endangered keystone wildlife species including conservation projects for endangered keystone wildlife species including elephants, rhinoceros, tigers, great apes and marine sea turtles MSCFSS offers us a unique opportunity to establish a new creative funding mechanism, at no cost to the taxpayer, to help save some of the most iconic endangered species on this planet. MSCFSS is modeled after the breast cancer semipostal stamp Doc Antle and Congressman Henry Brown celebrate the unanimous congressional passing of H.R. 1454 at the U.S. Capitol Building in Washington D.C. Some of the RSF animal ambassadors were present helping to illustrate the role of captive wildlife in wild conservation efforts.

Robert Johnson and "Mya" the white handed gibbon in the U.S. House of Representatives, helping politicians make a "personal connection" with wildlife and their cause.

Doc Antle testifying before the U.S. House of Representatives, Committee on Natural Resources about the value and benefit of H.R. 1454 to raise funds for wildlife conservation.

A letter issued by Congressman Brown thanking T.I.G.E.R.S. and the Rare Species Fund for their participation in helping to pass the new wildlife conservation initiative.